Foreword

Are you a light-worker or a dark-worker? You had better recognize the answer. After all, it's among the most crucial decisions you may ever arrive at. It impacts everything about you, from how you view the world, to how you treat individuals, to how you make a living, to possibly what awaits you in the hereafter.

Light worker and dark-worker are more or less synonymous with good and evil. They reflect the orientation of your morals, and therefore how you live your life.

We're all here on this planet to do something. Everybody is different, but we all wish to do our work, or fulfill a purpose, or produce value, or if nothing else, then at least live our life. And while it's crucial to figure out the specifics of what you wish to do, it's even more crucial to determine your intentions that set the stage.

The idea of polarization refers to how far you lean to either side. Most individuals have both light-worker and dark-worker tendencies, but they don't blend well together. If you attempt to be both a good light-worker and a good dark-worker, you'll be awful at both.

Polarities And It's Vital Functions

Discover If You Are A Light Worker And Dark Worker And How It Affects Your Life.

Chapter 1:

Background Info

Synopsis

Becoming a light-worker or dark-worker isn't something that simply occurs. It's a witting choice, one the huge bulk of individuals never arrive at.

You might have leanings toward one polarity or the other, and you may certainly experiment with both polarities as much as you want, but becoming a light-worker or dark-worker signifies making a particular commitment to command of a single polarity.

The Basics

When you choose to polarize, you're building a commitment to living a particular sort of life. It's like arriving at a commitment to a specific field that takes years to master, like preparation for the Olympic Games, becoming a musician, or becoming a chess master.

You aren't simply going to rouse one day to find that ... yup... you're a black belt, nor will you abruptly wake up and recognize you're a light-worker or a dark-worker. Polarizing as a light-worker or dark-worker is a vast long-term dedication. It doesn't simply occur by itself instantly from insight.

The determination to polarize is a determination you make with every fiber of your being. For a few individuals it might be an innate choice, felt as a sort of calling. Other people must spend much time exploring both polarities to make the polarization dedication really consciously and deliberately. But most individuals never polarize.

If you polarize as a light-worker, you're committing your life to assisting the greater good. If you polarize as a dark-worker, you're committing your life to assisting yourself.

It ought to be sort of obvious that most individuals never make this sort of commitment in their whole lives. Therefore, most individuals are neither lightworkers nor dark-workers. The 2 extremes of dedicating one's life to assisting the greater good or to assisting one's own self-concern are not attractive to most individuals. It's merely not for them.

Following polarizing, your polarity becomes the key focus of your life. You live and breathe it daily. It virtually gets to be part of your DNA. It's unimaginable to compartmentalize such a dedication. You can't work at a lowly job and do light-working or dark-working unofficially. That's like trying to be President of the United States "unofficially". Being a light-worker or dark-worker is a 24/7 thing, all year. It's who you are, not simply what you do.

Those who haven't polarized are free to feel both polarities, however at a much lower level of strength than either a light-worker or dark-worker may. As a matter of fact, it's of great advantage to explore both polarities and comprehend how they work.

If you're a light-worker or dark-worker, you'll have no question about it. That's by definition. If you've any question about it, you haven't polarized. This is as primary a matter as recognizing you're a black belt in a particular martial art. If you have to question, you're not a black belt.

The rationality for polarizing is because you're prepared to make a witting dedication to a particular sort of life. You're wishing to dedicate your whole being either to assisting the greater good or to assisting yourself. That dedication becomes your life intention. It becomes the very center of your identity. You're stating to the cosmos, "That's who I am."

When you make this dedication, you'll know yourself in a way you've never known yourself previously. You'll wake up daily recognizing why you're here, not because somebody told you why, but as you've specified your own why with the power of conscious choice. Each moment of each day, you'll recognize whom you are and what you're here to accomplish.

Polarization brings a fresh level of strength, drive, and motivation. Troubles and obstacles that previously would have overrun you will appear like pettiness. Once you set a goal that lines up with your polarity, you'll recognize — not wish — it will be achieved.

Acting replaces attempting. Therefore, you'll expand the scope of your goals to equal your strength. You'll likewise greatly expand your timeline for considering the outcomes of your choices, thinking ten, twenty, many years ahead as a foregone conclusion. Short-term follies will be substituted by long-term allegiances.

There are levels of polarization. The more polarized you get, the more you tap into your richest degrees of inner power. Whether you're a dark-worker or a light-worker, your origin of force is always found inside.

It isn't a sort of means or positional power. You may be deprived of all your worldly titles and possessions and yet feel even as secure. As a light-worker, your power flows outward. As a dark-worker, your power flows inward. The origin of this flow is always within you — based inside your consciousness — and your polarity regulates the flow's direction.

If you don't wish to polarize, don't. You're free to go along utilizing both polarities if you so decide. Simply be aware that you may never expect to surmount either polarity unless you dedicate to one or the other. Put differently, if you don't polarize, you'll forever live with the knowledge that you lived far beneath your potential in terms of your power to assist others or to assist yourself. Your assistance to the world as well as your assistance to yourself will be average at best compared to what you may have accomplished had you polarized. This ought to be sort of obvious. Once you polarize, you're making a solid dedication, and when you're really dedicated to something, you'll invest a lot more time and energy into your quests than you would differently.

Polarization is a particular sort of dedication, like dedicating to mastery of a particular field like music, artistry, medicine, or computer programming. Most individuals never make such a big dedication. But you can't hope to control anything unless you dedicate to mastery of one thing.

Control is a procedure, not a place. Control is when you turn a want into a downright must. For light-workers and dark workers, these dedications are attained for different reasons.

However, in either case, a witting conclusion is made to devote one's time, power, resources, and talents to the selected role with an elevated degree of intensity. That strength of focus is possibly what most distinguishes somebody who's polarized.

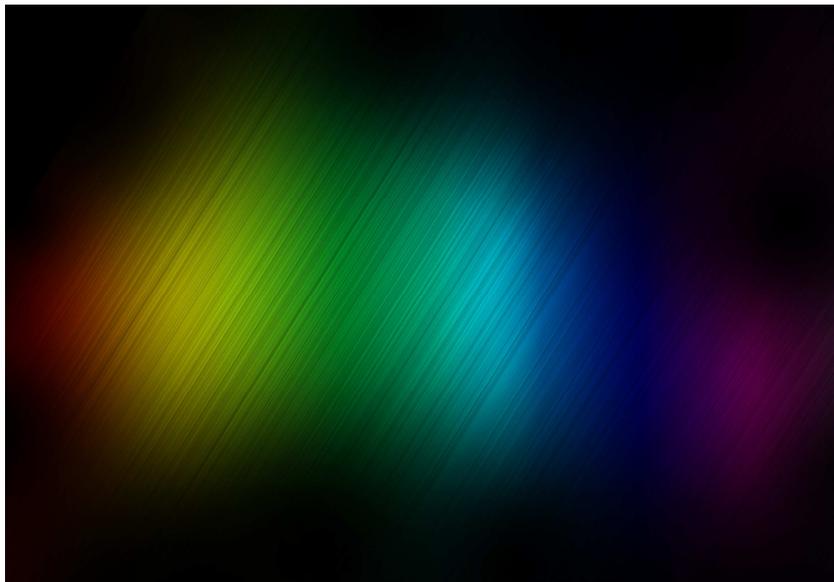

Chapter 2:

In-depth Look At Both Sides

Synopsis

Think for a minute that you're a solitary person in the bigger body of mankind. What sort of person are you? Do you endeavor to accomplish your separate wellness and comfort? Do you work for the improvement of others? Do you feel of devotion to the betterment of the whole system?

Both light-workers and dark-workers are extremely conscious. They each realize the existence of the bigger body of mankind, and they understand their actions impact other people for good or bad. Those who respond without a great deal of awareness of how their actions impact the huge majority of individuals are neither dark-workers nor light-workers. If you aren't certain which one you are, it's safe to state that you're neither.

The Differences

A light-worker is a person that trusts its chief role is to serve the bigger good of the system. It considers this job so crucial that it would even forfeit its own life in such a pursuance if it thought it was essential. This is because a light-worker identifies more with the bigger system than with the individual person it controls. Light-workers view themselves with the individual ego identity not as crucial.

In order to be good in its role, a light-worker has to pay attention to its own wellness and survival to the degree that its preserved existence profits the system. It does what's essential to protect itself from anything that may interrupt its mission. It attempts to maintain its wellbeing without harming anything else, but when a light-worker comes across other things that actively work against the good of the system, conflict may surely happen. Your own body works thru a like mechanism. If particular disease-producing things get out of control and endanger the health of your body, your body reacts by attacking those things.

The light-worker's duty is to assist the health of the system. Light-workers reach for a healthy, sane world. They fight diseases like cruelty, indifference, depression, disempowerment, dishonesty, and cowardliness. Such diseases harm the health of the system. The #1 disease light-workers fight is fearfulness. Wherever there's fearfulness in mankind, light-workers are pushed to act.

One goal of a lot of light-workers is to induce the production of more light-workers. This might occur directly, but more frequently it happens by cultivating the circumstances under which more light-workers will be produced. Because of the work of light-workers, others become light-workers too. It isn't essential for each person in the system to become light-workers. The system only requires enough light-workers to neutralize present threats to its wellness. Light-workers are participating cells, not inactive ones. These aren't individuals who sit around and contemplate all day, although that might be part of their practice, particularly during the changeover period when the light-worker role is gradually assumed.

Light-workers are individuals who make it their personal duty to get mankind back on track by forestalling fearfulness, untruth, and cruelty wherever they discover it. They accomplish this by bestowing light to dark situations. They empower others to shed fearfulness and to be strong again as strong, empowered things yield a strong, healthy system.

A dark-worker is a person that refuses all responsibility for the wellness of the system. The dark-worker states, "I'm responsible for my separate life solely, and the rest of the system is simply a tool for accomplishing my own joy". Dark-workers are basically cancer cells. They've no misgivings about injuring the system to further their own designs as the wellness of the system is of little import to them.

To a dark-worker, most other things are expendable. The other things and the system at large are simply instruments of the dark-worker's joy. The dark-worker's rights and privileges are predominant, and human rights in the fuller sense are irrelevant. A dark-worker cares only for personal advancement. The outcomes to other parts are of little or no concern. Dark-workers have no understanding for what other parts go through. If other people have to suffer for the dark-worker's joy, so be it.

Dark-workers like authority. Increasing their authority is their chief aim, as that's the means by which they accomplish more pleasure for themselves. Dark-workers generally produce and utilize techniques that exploit other people for personal gain. The harm of others is nonmeaningful. As long as the dark-worker advances, that's all that matters. Dark-workers are really competitive. Succeeding for themselves is far more crucial than assisting somebody else. A dark-worker solely assists others to the extent that it advances their personal agenda.

There are chiefly two ways a dark-worker will use others: fearfulness and greed. For instance, if you work in a corporation that shapes and controls your conduct with fear-based incentives (threat of penalty or disciplinary action) or greed-based motivators (more cash, power, command), it's a safe bet you're a instrument of one or more dark-workers someplace upriver.

If such schemes appear normal to you, you've been effectively brainwashed to be a worker bee. You likely aren't even aware of the upper-level agenda you service, as an intelligent dark-worker won't disclose it publicly. If you work for a dark-worker, your true agenda is to step-up the dark-worker's power, in spite of any ornate speeches or mission statements contrarily.

Knavery and misrepresentation are popular tools of dark-workers. These enable the dark-worker to establish authority while supposedly embracing additional values. Most people don't question authority much, so dark-workers commonly have a simple time establishing authority if they're semi-intelligent. If you don't care what happens to others, you may bolt down a lot of authority, as most people readily yield their authority to any sensed power. Dark-workers tap this fact for personal gain.

By their behaviors dark-workers toxify mankind, producing the conditions that bring about more dark-workers. Dark-workers flourish in a climate of fearfulness. Fearfulness is the tool of their trade. The more fearfulness they may produce, the more potent they may become.

Fearfulness produces willing and obedient worker bees who bow to the will of the dark-worker. Cunning dark-workers utilize deception to make submission appear like a smart choice. This approach may be rather effective. When fearfulness is ineffective, dark-workers utilize greed alternatively.

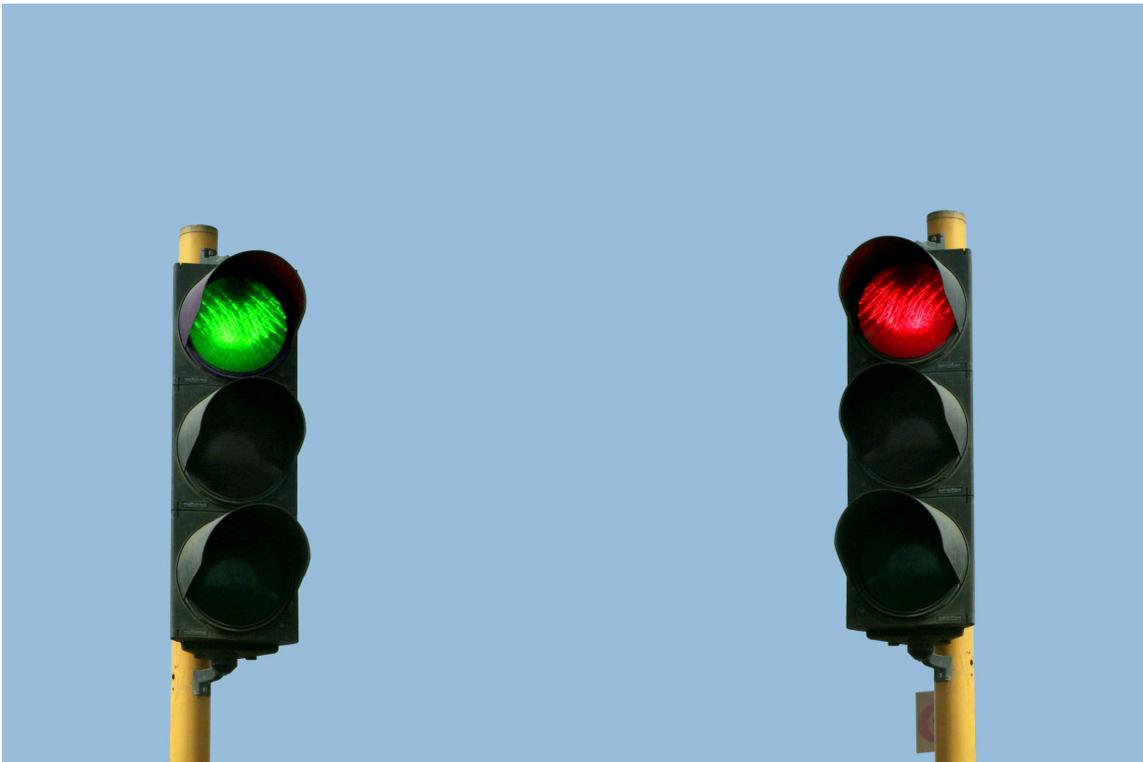

The finest dark-workers are frequently surrounded by armies of worker bees who willingly forfeit their freedom for a payroll check and a fake sense of security. Fearfulness and greed can't command or inspire highly conscious individuals, but such techniques work exceedingly well with those who've been disciplined to be worker bees.

Dark-workers like obedience. In their illusions, they wish they could command or dominate others. If you work in an establishment where obedience is honored more than honesty, you've got a dark-worker in charge. It's been stated that obedience is the 1st milepost on the road to freedom. The individual who stated that was Hitler. Those who obeyed him acquired greater control for a while but surely not freedom.

There are humans who have selected this path deliberately. They're aware that their behaviors are destructive to the system, but they plainly don't care. They feel that self-service is the greatest expression of their identity. They don't identify with the bigger system of mankind. It's simply a tool to be wangled at will.

From the dark-worker position, watching out for number 1 is seen as a common sense life-style choice. The world is deemed a competitive place, so to a dark-worker the technique of self-above-others doesn't produce much of an ethical quandary.

The advantage of dark-workers is that they gradually assist the system to get stronger, just as getting sick may strengthen your immune system over time. Therefore, dark-workers may indirectly serve the higher good, as long as they don't kill the system in the process.

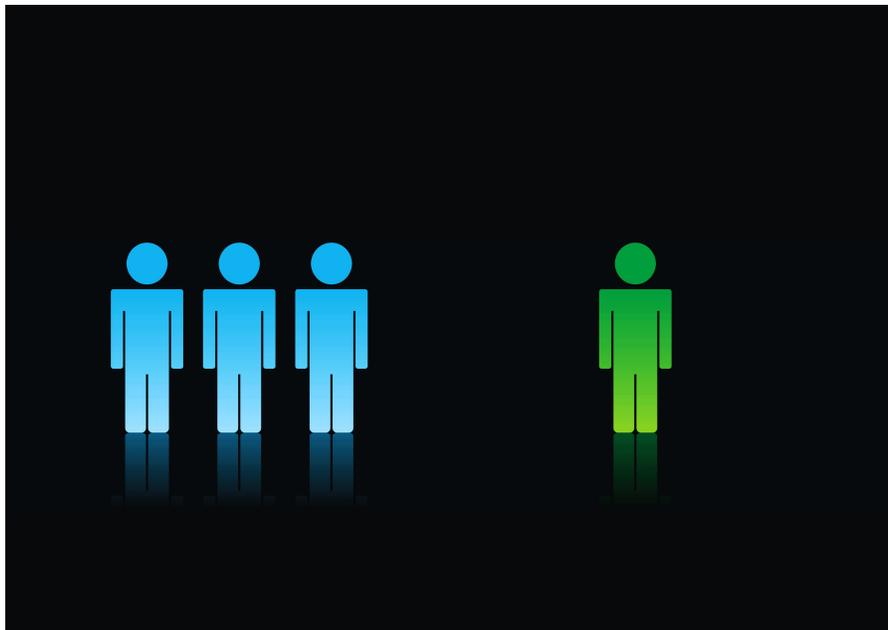

Chapter 3:

The Human Condition

Synopsis

In the body of mankind today, there's an unhealthy overabundance of dark-workers. The systems wellness has been slumping awhile, largely due to the work of too many dark-workers in places of power. The compromised wellness of the system is likewise injuring the health of individuals, making a lot of them to feel disempowered, diminished, fearful, and dejected. Then those individuals drop into survival mode. Rather than centering on service to the better good, they fear for their own surety. This is precisely what the dark-workers wish. The more fearfulness that's rendered, the more potent the dark-workers get. When fear isn't adequate, greed is utilized as a control mechanism alternatively.

The Call

When somebody opposes those potent dark-workers, the dark-workers frequently react with violent force to hush them to the degree they may get away with it. They utilize fear and bullying to increase their power to silence opposition and to step-up their power. This isn't accidental. It's really calculated. These dark-workers are not true leaders. A better word may be controllers. They're simply able to lead worker bees who submit to command by fear. Highly conscious individuals see such dark-workers as factors of disease, not as authentic leaders.

In this climate of fearfulness, more dark-workers are being produced. More individuals are reasoning, "Screw the rest of mankind. I'm going to live totally for myself and advance as much as possible." So the primary issue we have today is that dark-workers have been becoming out of control. This issue hasn't gone unnoticed by the larger system of mankind, and the other side is kicking in kind of powerfully.

The collective awareness of mankind is cognizant of its condition. It recognizes the system is unhealthy and is going downhill. It recognizes that left unbridled, the dark-worker menace will take the system down with it. Although this climate produces to more dark-workers, there's likewise a solid counter-reaction. The comportment of disease is setting off the system to increase the light-workers.

The final result is that many individuals are now hearing this call. Mankind is behaving in its own defense by calling more light-workers into action. Some individuals are born with this tendency, some have had it for a long time, and others are presently waking up to it. This call produces a sense of, "stop... we've truly gotten off course here.

This isn't how the Earth is supposed to be. Somebody has to do something about it. Darn... I believe that somebody is me. How am I going to assume something so huge?"

I think only a small percentage of people will resonate with; I believe that somebody is me. If you've a lot of fearfulness and/or greed in you, you won't probably hear this calling as it isn't spread on those channels. But if you attempt to move beyond fearfulness and greed, finally you'll begin feeling a faint inclination to accomplish something "good" that assists the world in some little way. Over time that feeling will get mightier and more specific.

If you do discover such a calling, your beginning inclination will likely be to restrain it. Plow ahead and try if you have to, but when you receive the call, it's too late for you. You'll never be happy living as a worker bee again, regardless how hard you try. You'll feel less connected from others who live like worker bees. You'll feel a firm desire to discover others who can see what you're now seeing. Your responsibility is to be part of the resolution. That obligation can't be ignored except to the extent you submerge yourself in fear. The silver lining is that you aren't solo.

Do you have any feel of mankind's call for assistance? Do you feel this earth has become a little off course? Do you feel a personal obligation to do something about it? If you don't hear any particular calling and have no true concern for the bigger system of mankind, or if you don't feel personally obligated to do anything about it, then simply keep diligently working on your own personal development. The body will rally you when it has need of your services. If it rallies you, it knows you're solid enough to contribute, even if you've grave doubts.
